ABORIGINAL CULTURE

Just like America, Australia was colonised by the British in the late 1700s, but before there were Europeans in Australia, there were a group of people living on and working the land who are referred to as the Aboriginals, or Indigenous Australians. They have been in Australia between 40,000 and 70,000 years. The dates are a little fuzzy because we weren't so great at keeping calendars back then. The Aboriginal culture and traditions give a richness to Australia that can even be seen in Western culture. There are probably parts of Aboriginal culture that you are familiar with and didn't even know it! I bet you've heard of a boomerang, you may have even seen one or played with it! Did you know that the boomerang was invented by Aboriginals for hunting animals? Now it is a popular toy because of its uncanny ability to come back when you throw it! Would you like to try to make your own? There are a few instructions in the link below!

Aboriginal Art is another great contribution from this unique culture! This style of art is unique for using a dot technique and its images show scenes of nature. It's not difficult to make yourself, but the true intricacy of the art is unique to the Aboriginal people. Would you like to try to make a turtle? Check out the video below!

Last but not least is the music iconic to Aboriginals, which is the didgeridoo. The word may sound a little funny, but the music that it makes is unique and beautiful. The didgeridoo is a wind instrument, and is a long cylinder usually made from wood. The music it makes is so beautiful that countries around the world have adopted this instrument. Let's explore the didgeridoo more! Below there are links to listen, make, and play a didgeridoo! We can't wait to hear about your new skills!
